

blending light landscape environment & nature through design

BLEND IS A DESIGN and research office that specialises in creating unique identities across various fields, such as architecture, landscape, interiors, furniture and lighting design. With their expertise, they have received several international distinctions for their distinctive architectural identities in both residential and commercial projects.

The retrofit of the 500m² radiotherapy oncology wing at IASO Medical Group in Maroussi, Attica, is an excellent example of Blend's design prowess. The project involved integrating a new 297m² sector seamlessly and creating a modern, supportive shell that incorporates wellness elements to enhance the therapeutic environment. The project aimed to provide a sense of security and protection for both patients and medical staff.

The design process involved literature research, empirical data collection, and analysis, including observations and interviews with medical staff, patients, and family members, to create custom curved kitchenettes, bespoke artwork, wayfinding panels and a free-flowing Corian reception area. The team also incorporated state-of-the-art linear accelerators, adhered to strict design and antimicrobial material requirements, and minimised disruption to daily operations.

Creating a strong contrast of colour in the waiting areas, corridors, and therapy rooms, shifting spatial boundaries, the design served as a metaphorical transition from darkness to the bright path of healing.

The materials and textures had an earthy palette, and aromatherapy from Mediterranean herbs and aromatics provided a relaxing atmosphere for visitors. Signage design was emphasised, incorporating light sources from RGB LEDs to guide patients along their path while reinforcing feelings of hope and optimism.

Blend's design approach is unique and commendable for its emphasis on creating purposeful designs that promote well-being, sustainability and longevity.
